Maynooth University

In 1795, and in accordance with an Act of Grattan's Parliament, a College was established in Maynooth on property obtained from the then Duke of Leinster. The original College functioned as a Catholic seminary and in 1896 it was accorded the status of a Pontifical University. Following the establishment of the National University of Ireland, the institution became a Recognised College of the N.U.I. in 1910. In 1966 the College ceased to be purely a seminary and thereafter the inclusion of lay students led to a significant expansion in numbers, facilities and academic departments. The Universities Act, 1997 established the University as one of four constituent universities of the National University of Ireland. It was thereby legally separated from the Seminary and Pontifical University which continues to function as a separate entity known as St Patrick's College. Maynooth University is governed by a Governing Authority of twenty-nine members and is similar in composition to that of the other six Irish universities. It has developed an attractive new campus of some seventy-five acres (North Campus) while still retaining shared usage of the original eighteenth century campus (South Campus). The University has a long and distinguished tradition of scholarship and many of its departments in the Sciences and Arts trace their origins to foundation chairs of 1795.

The last two decades have seen the University grow rapidly in scale strength and stature. Maynooth University is today a university of international standing, renowned for the quality and value of its research and scholarship, for its dedication to excellent teaching, for providing an outstanding learning experience for its 10,000 students, and as a uniquely collegial environment in which to pursue scholarly work. Maynooth University is located 25 km from the centre of Dublin city, on a campus which reflects the University's 18th century roots and 21st century dynamism. It is Ireland's fastest-growing university, embedded in and engaged with Ireland's fastest-growing and economically most important region. The University provides an exceptional student experience for all its students, and is a national leader in widening participation, with the highest proportion of non-traditional and first-generation students of any Irish university. In an important recent development, Maynooth University, Dublin City University and the Royal College of Surgeons in Ireland have established the 3U Partnership, a new strategic partnership that brings together the distinctive and complementary strengths of the three partner institutions. Maynooth University is embarking upon the next phase of its development, under the leadership of a new President, with a vision to consolidate the international reputation of Maynooth University as a university known for outstanding teaching, excellent research, a global outlook, effective engagement with enterprise and the community, and a distinctive approach to the challenges facing modern higher education. A University Strategic Plan to 2017 has been agreed by the Governing Authority.
